Chairman's Message

George Waite
Chairman of The Belgravia Society
and ESRA

Our Vice Chairman, Helen Oratore has long championed our 'Young Belgravians' membership and recently introduced me to, possibly, our youngest member. Alexander is now thirteen and has been actively involved with the Society for several years. Shocked by the increasing reports of mobile phone theft, he approached Helen with the idea of launching a membership awareness campaign. Here are his ideas:

- Increase Police patrols to combat phone snatching. If we are to realise this, we must ensure that as many incidents as possible are reported; the Police need this data to justify an increased presence.
- Lobby for stronger penalties for phone snatching. Many phone thefts, especially those that are snatched when the owner is on the phone, risk more than the loss of the expensive hardware, but also the loss of personal data such as bank details and security passwords, etc.
- Install more CCTV in high-risk areas. Whilst this is expensive it is fast becoming a necessity, and the latest cameras are extremely accurate and can operate 24/7.
- Launch a public awareness campaign. The current Police awareness campaigns are extremely informative and help us to develop safer habits rather than exposing ourselves to criminality, which is far too often becoming theft and assault with deadly weapons.

- Create a city-wide hotline for reporting phone snatching. The Police often refer to criminal gangs that move from area to area to avoid detection. Whilst the Police continue to be under-resourced, we need to campaign for technology fixes, such as a hotline, that will enable the Police to better respond to gang activity.
- Enhance Community Watch programmes. I am not sure that 'enhance' is the term I would use, perhaps 'start' better describes areas such as Belgravia. In any event, such a program will need to be agreed with the Police.
- Introduce phone-snatching prevention education in schools. Alexander explains this as a fundamental approach in helping adolescents understand the importance of safety and having the appropriate training to prevent, react and report situations of phone snatching. By educating young people about smartphone theft, a cumulative impact of reducing such crime can be made.

We are really impressed with Alexander taking this initiative and are working with him to set up a Belgravia Society site to report stolen mobile phones so that we can better present the statistics to the Police and major stakeholders at our regular meetings. ▲

State Opening of Parliament

After some five weeks of nothing but electioneering, it came as a great relief when it was all over. Whatever the political outcome, we followed through all the unwritten constitutional requirements.

After the election was the State Opening of Parliament. It is a royal ceremony of great antiquity and was well-established by the late fourteenth century. It not only marks the end of the election process but also marks the start of a parliamentary year. State opening is an annual part of the constitution and we can enjoy the pomp and ceremony of it.

The modern state opening ceremony dates to 1852, when the new Palace of Westminster was opened. The route to Parliament is the same one followed by Queen Victoria for the first time in 1852.

This year the State Opening took place on Wednesday 17th July following the outcome of the election. The event begins with the Monarch's procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster, escorted by the Household Cavalry.

The Monarch arrives at Sovereign's Entrance and proceeds to the Robing Room. Wearing the Imperial State Crown and the Robe of State, he leads the Royal Procession through the Royal Gallery, packed with 600 guests, to the chamber of the House of Lords.

The House of Lords send Black Rod to summon the Commons. Black Rod is a senior official in the House of Lords. While Black Rod has administrative duties, the most well recognised is the role at the State Opening of Parliament.

The House of Lords

The present Black Rod is Sarah Clarke who was appointed on 17th November 2017 and formally took on the duties as Lady Usher of the Black Rod. It is her responsibility to summon the House of Commons to the House of Lords to hear the King's speech.

The doors to the Commons chamber are shut in her face: a practice dating back to the Civil War, symbolising the Commons' independence from the monarchy. Black Rod strikes the door three times before it is opened. Members of the House of Commons then follow Black Rod and the Commons Speaker to the Lord's Chamber, standing at the opposite end to the throne, known as the Bar of the House, to listen to the Speech.

The Monarch's Speech is delivered from the throne in the House of Lords. Although the Monarch reads the Speech, it is written by the Government. It contains an outline of its policies and proposed legislation for the new parliamentary session.

When the Monarch leaves, a new parliamentary session begins and Parliament gets back to work. Members of both Houses debate the content of the Speech and agree an 'Address in Reply to His Majesty's Gracious Speech'. Each House continues the debate over the planned legislative programme for several days, looking at different subject areas. The Monarch's Speech is voted on by the Commons, but rarely in the Lords. ▲

The Case of the Vanishing Police Stations

It happened on an article in The Evening Standard, itself doomed to vanish soon, about our vanishing police stations in London. Fifteen years ago the capital had 160 police stations. Now there are only 36.

We know a thing or two about losing our police stations. The best known one opened in 1846, in a street called Cottage Row. The street was renamed in 1885 and the police station became known as Gerald Road. Gerald Road remained there until 1993. It was then converted into a private house. Ronnie Biggs, the great train robber, spent one night there. It was replaced by a new police station not very far away, but still in Belgravia at 202-206

Buckingham Palace Road. However, that was closed despite all the objections from residents and Councillors to prevent it. The building is now being repurposed for commercial use.

The closure of these stations was for financial savings. Now we hear that the number of police stations is set to go even lower to reach only one in each of the 32 boroughs. Despite the immediate savings, it may be seen as a catastrophic decision for the people of London. Cutting the police budget by a quarter and the police station closures, the effects on crime have been significantly adverse according to an academic, Dr Eliza Faccherri. Her work was a new analysis published by the Institute for Fiscal Studies. The report showed three effects, all of them negative, and argues that unexpected costs of closing stations have fallen on other parts of society. The first negative outcome was when a police station closed, the most serious crimes seemed to go up. This saw an increase in violent crimes and murders. There was a rise of 12% in violent crime but, separately, knife and gun crime went up 20% following closures.

Police in action at Belgrave Square

Secondly, police response times were much slower because of the distance of police stations from where the crimes were committed and therefore increased response times. Vital interviewing time for witnesses was lost. Thirdly there was and is an effect on reporting offences, particularly petty crimes, because the public no longer had any real confidence that reports would be acted on.

Criminals are also more likely to operate in places where they know police stations have been abandoned, and those areas are more likely to be targeted. The view was supported with more ammunition in a report published last year by Baroness Casey on the Met. She also warned that the “basic command units”, each covering several boroughs, has led to “much weaker connections to long established communities” and “longer response times”, as well as “less knowledge of local crime patterns”.

The Police and Crime Commissioner for Devon, Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly has opened police enquiry offices around the area, some 13 now, and five more due. That means residents are closer to police station staff front desk and of course response times have reduced. There is so much to be said for such an arrangement so it seems to us that we should press for it in London as well so that we can all feel protected and perhaps the crime rates will fall at last. The present arrangements are simply not suitable for purpose. ▲

Change for the most Senior Law Officers

We have seen in the last year the transition of the great offices to women for the first time.

Lady Chief Justice, Dame Sue Carr

This may seem a singularly unimportant matter but history has been made in the last year. There are senior law offices, Lord Chief Justice and Lord Chancellor. The former dates back to the 13th century and the latter to the late 15th century.

We have seen in the last year the transition of the great offices to women for the first time. We have also seen our election and a parliamentary democracy triumph for its peace, calm and accord in the momentous change from one government to the next. Whatever our politics, we must cherish and support the democracy that we have enjoyed for centuries and ensure as best we can that we maintain the system we have. Sectarian and other parties which can damage the democracy seek changes to our electoral system which would undermine our stability.

We should not be influenced by parties who complain a system makes it impossible for them to have as many seats as votes and claim proportional representation is fairer. Looking at those nations who do have proportional representation we can see the instability of government it causes. Worse still in order to make a coalition often extreme political parties are invited to join and then the coalition is bound to take into account minority extreme views and enact them to avoid the coalition losing power.

One of the great joys of our unwritten constitution its longevity, security and stability it has given us is that we can rejoice in it no matter what our party political views are.

So to the appointment of two women to the great offices we have mentioned: Lady Chief Justice, Dame Sue Carr is the President of the Courts of England and Wales and Head of the Judiciary of England and Wales. She is the 98th person to hold this historic office and the first woman. Dame Carr was sworn in at a ceremony held at the Royal Courts of Justice, where she took the judicial oath. The ceremony was attended by many representatives from across the justice system with speeches delivered by the Master of the Rolls and Attorney General, as well as representatives from the Bar Council and Law Society.

Dame Carr said “It is a great privilege to assume this role. I do not underestimate the challenges that lie ahead, and I look forward to approaching the role with energy, enthusiasm, and positivity. The rule of law is a fundamental constitutional principle which underpins an open, fair and peaceful society, where citizens and businesses can prosper.”

Following the election Baroness Carr of Walton-on-the-Hill, the Lady Chief Justice of England and Wales conducted the swearing-in ceremony with the other appointees. The Right Honourable Shabana Mahmood MP was appointed as Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice on 5th July 2024. She was elected as the MP for Birmingham Ladywood in July 2024. She is the first woman to hold that position and the first to swear allegiance on the Koran. Sarah Sackman MP was also sworn in as the Attorney General and Solicitor General.

Dame Carr went on to congratulate each of the appointees and wished them well in the discharge of their constitutional responsibilities. She said, “We look forward to working with you constructively and to secure a proper administration of justice and wish you well in the discharge of your constitutional responsibilities to secure the proper administration of justice and maintain the rule of law.”

So history has been made and our constitution honoured as we can be so proud of our history and our democracy. ▲

Where have all the butterflies gone?

BY SARA OLIVER

I love watching butterflies flitting about in the summer sunshine. However, the recent summer weather has been quite wet and therefore not conducive to their welfare, so there have been fewer butterflies out and about. The manifesto for the butterflies and moths set out by the Butterfly Conservation Organisation is that they want a planet where butterflies and moths can be enjoyed by everybody for all time.

Reverse the trend

Butterflies and moths are essential to the fragile eco-system and when they are thriving it reflects on the environment. However, since the UK is currently facing a biodiversity crisis, these declines need to be reversed. Time is running out and now is the time to act!

Big butterfly count

From 12th July until 4th August is the annual Big Butterfly Count. All you need to do is to find a nice spot and enjoy some quality time in a sunny place where you can count the number of butterflies you see in the space of 15 minutes.

Perhaps a quiet corner in Belgrave or Eaton Squares would suffice, or even Wilton Crescent and Ebury Square. If you are fortunate to have a garden or a balcony near sunshine and greenery, then why not give it a go? Even if you do not see anything, please record that also, as all this information helps to give a picture of the state of the environmental situation.

Join in and it is both a calming and relaxing activity and helps Butterfly Conservation collect vital data to save butterflies. Both butterflies and moths are sensitive indicators of the health of our environment. Please take a moment to think about butterflies and moths and start counting if you have not done so already – there is still time. You can find out more information by visiting the website belwo and obtain all the resources you need including a free butterfly ID chart. ▲

WCC Rishma Sangha

Planning Enforcement

At our monthly meeting on 9th July, we were privileged to have our Senior Planning Officer for Knightsbridge and Belgravia, Rishma Sangha visit us. She was able to tell us so much about her work and the work of the Westminster City Council (WCC) to deal with planning enforcement.

The primary role of planning officers is to investigate all reports made to WCC and take enforcement action where appropriate, proportionate and expedient. We were surprised to learn that enforcement is discretionary, and steps may be considered when assessing breaches of planning control which can include informal action, formal action and, of course, no action. WCC will generally try to resolve planning breaches through informal action and negotiation first.

Rishma explained the extent of the work on planning control and told us that WCC are concerned with works to listed buildings, external works to non-listed buildings, untidy land/conditions of buildings, display of advertisements, change of use, installation of plant equipment, works to trees and non-compliance with planning conditions, and compliance with permissions attached to consents.

It is also important to know that there are things that cannot be investigated. These include internal works to non-listed buildings, work that is permitted development. It also includes change of use within the same use class, party wall agreements and ownership and leasehold disputes, antisocial behaviour, health and safety issues on building sites, parking issues and tables and chairs on the highway.

It is important to report a breach of planning control, bearing in mind what is covered. To report online, the WCC “Report It” function is available, or by phone via the WCC call centre on 020 7641 6000, or by email to planningenforcementTeam@westminster.gov.uk.

Rishma answered questions from the Committee, and we were very grateful to her for the time she gave us. It certainly was interesting and helped us understand what could and could not be investigated by the planning team. It is so important to understand things which are not issues which can be investigated too. That is something that arises quite often over a change of use.

We thank Rishma very much for her time and giving us such a comprehensive insight to her job and the powers of WCC. ▲

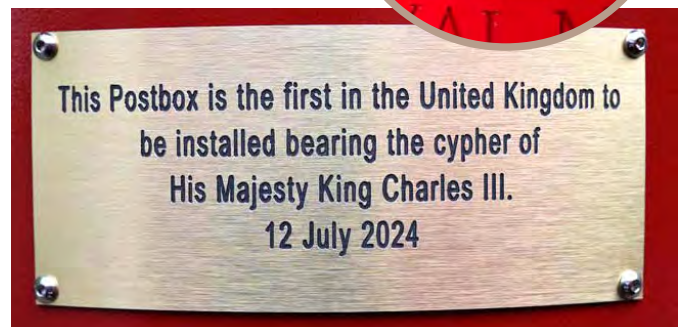

First postbox with the cypher of King Charles

The first postbox bearing the cypher of King Charles has been installed. It was unveiled with the help of local primary children in High Street, Great Cambourne in South Cambridgeshire. Existing postboxes will continue to bear the cypher of the late Queen to mark the reign in which they were installed. New and replacement boxes will now carry the King's cypher.

Pupils from Vine Inter-Church Primary were the first to use it, posting handwritten letters to the King inviting him to open their New Forest school and asking for advice on sustainability. (We do not know if there has been a response yet.)

The postbox has been given a plaque to mark its special status as being the first to carry the King's cypher. By tradition, the cypher is personal to the King and he has to grant permission to the Royal Mail to use it, which of course he has given. The cypher consists of his initial with the Roman number III and then capital R which is for Rex and the Crown which is based on a Tudor crown. It is traditional that postboxes have on them the Royal cypher and this dates back 170 years to Queen Victoria's reign.

As the King has given permission to use the cypher it will also be put on the doors of Royal Mail vehicles replacing that of the late Queen. The change has been applied to 100 vehicles already with 290 more to be done shortly. 3,636 vehicles will have the full cypher updated by October.

The Royal Mail has also announced a change in its brand logo, known as the Cruciform. The logo, with its yellow double-lined lettering of Royal Mail used on the company's vehicle livery, buildings, website and stationery, will now have the Tudor crown used by the King rather than the Edward's crown used by the late Queen.

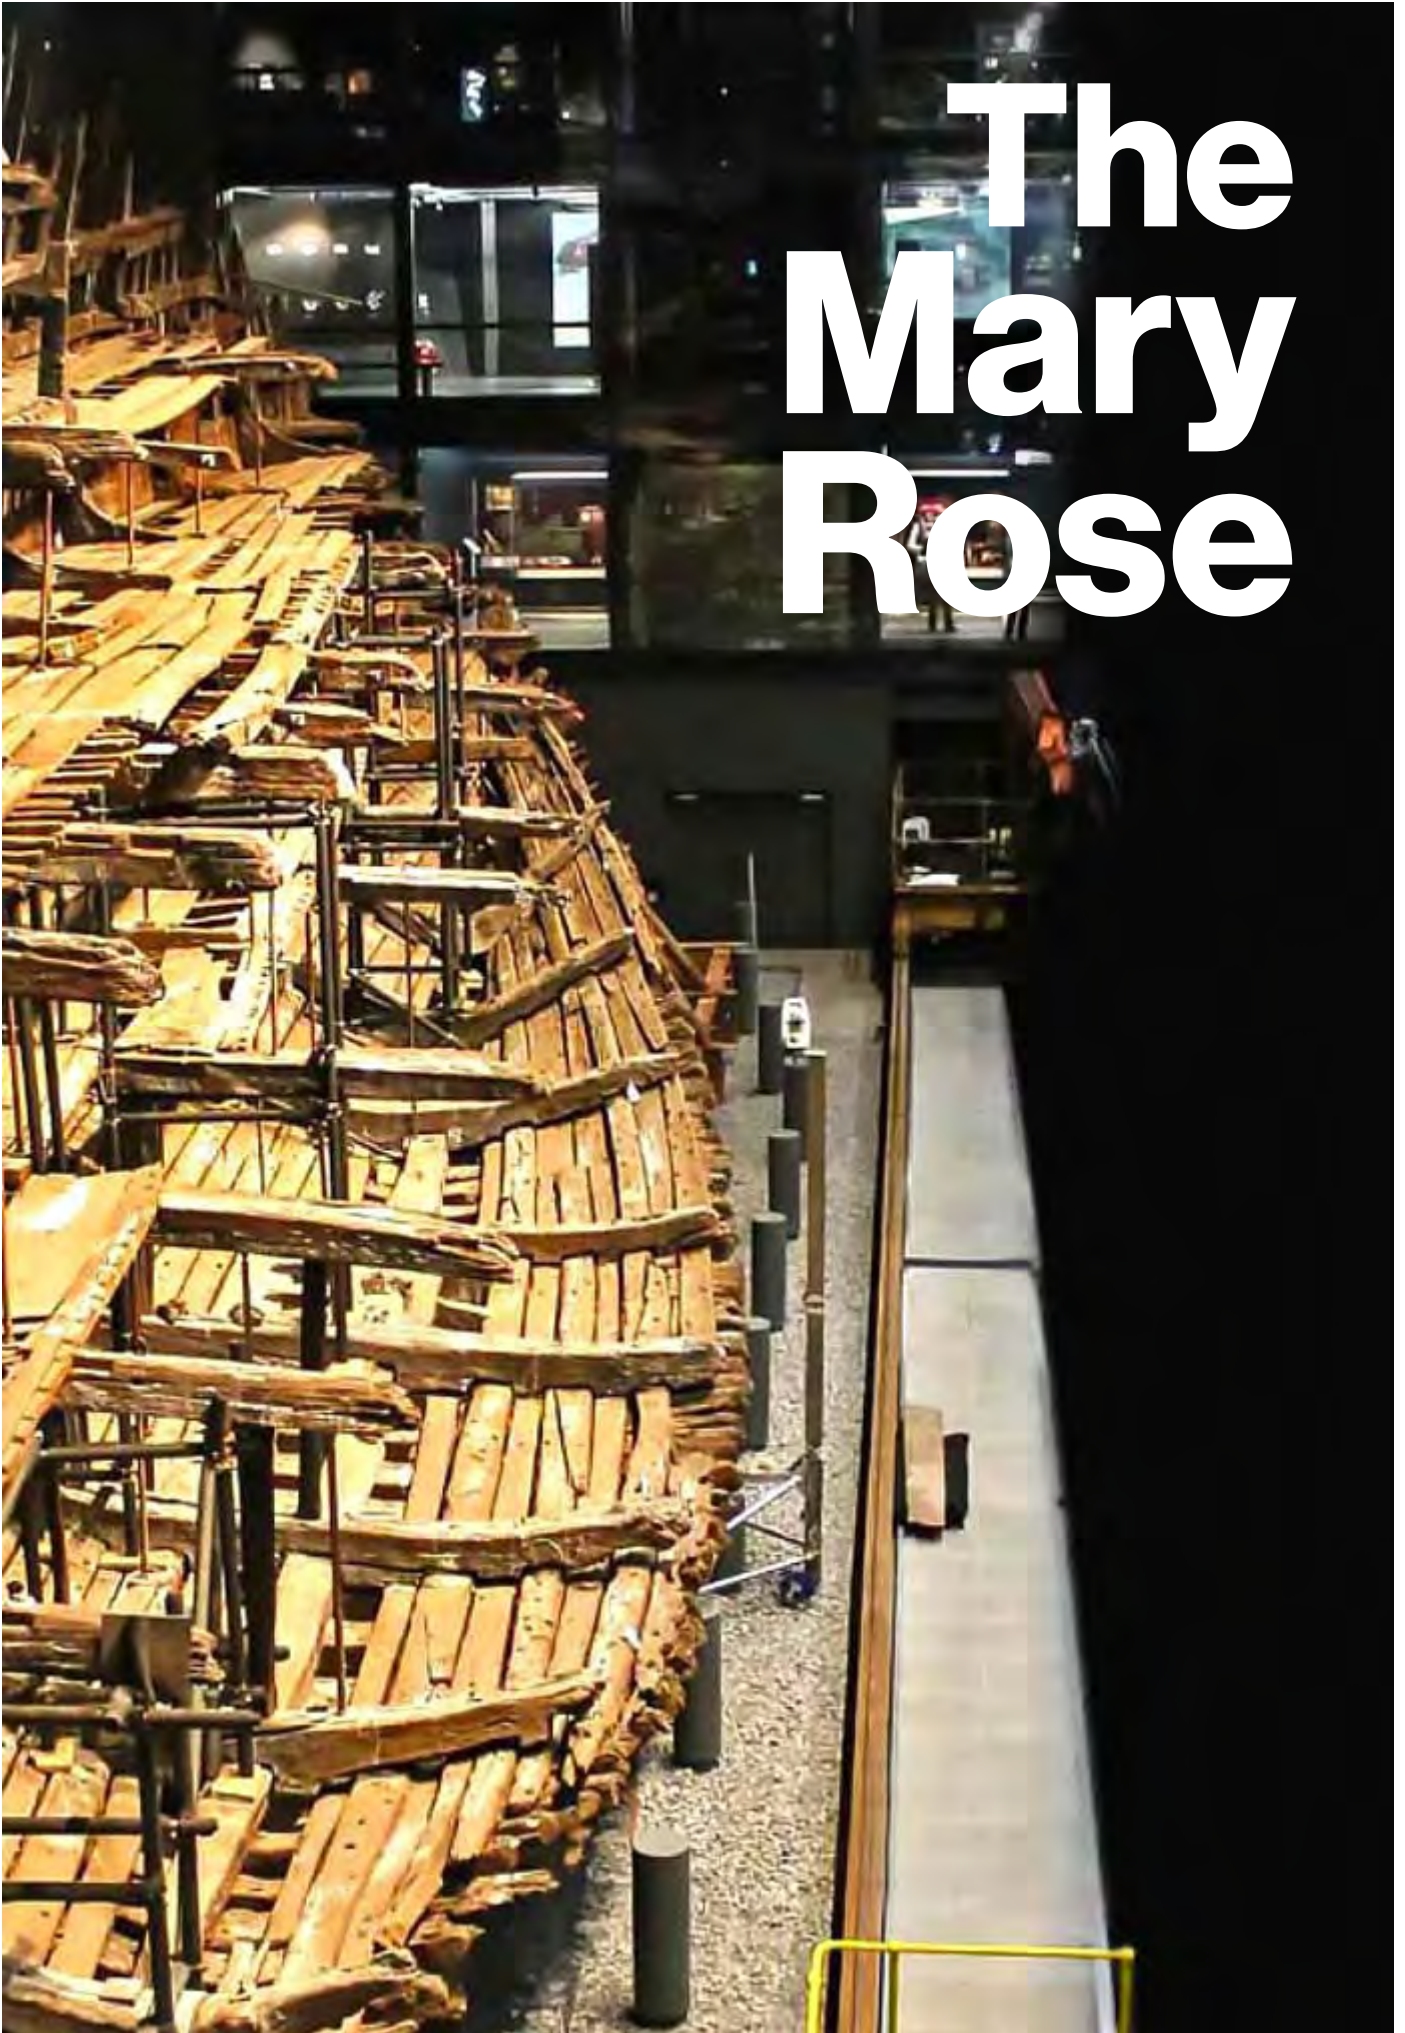

Emma Gilthorpe, Royal Mail's Chief Executive, said: "More than 115,000 postboxes across the UK have recorded the succession of monarchs since the first box bore the cypher of Queen Victoria. We thank His Majesty for granting us the use of his personal cypher as we begin the next chapter in the story of the iconic Great British postbox in Great Cambourne."

The postboxes which have the cyphers of previous monarchs will remain as they record the succession of monarchs and are part of our history. ▲

The Mary Rose

We have often featured a piece on the Mary Rose. It is a time capsule and tells us so much about life of Tudor mariners and Tudor life. With the anniversary of her sinking on 19th July, we thought we would look at the ship herself.

The Mary Rose was picked by the Admiral of the Fleet as his flagship England was not a sea power when Henry VIII came to the throne in 1509, and had no Navy in the sense of how we think of one today. The old procedure was to commandeer merchant ships and give them back after a specified period – 40 days was the standard service time for a soldier in the medieval period. This was not very effective, however, so the order was given to build two new ships.

Laid down in January 1510 and built that same year costing King Henry £3,000 out of his £100,000 yearly allowance, the Mary Rose and her sister ship, the Peter Pomegranate, are often regarded as the starting point for the modern Navy – alongside the Regent and the Sovereign, which Henry inherited from his father, Henry VII.

The Mary Rose had a 34 year career after launching in 1511, predominately serving in home waters and in France. The Mary Rose would see her final action against the French in 1545 during the Battle of the Solent, within view of Southsea Castle where the King watched on.

The Mary Rose was originally a troop transportation ship but, in 1536, she was refitted so she could have more guns; at the time of her sinking she was armed with 39 mounted carriage guns. The alterations and the addition of more guns during the 1530s and 1540s could have affected her stability. No one is really sure what caused the ship to sink. However, she had just fired guns on her starboard side. After firing her starboard guns, she turned sharply with her gun ports open so that the gun ports were open on both sides. As the ship took on water coming through the open gun ports, this caused the ship to list and sink.

There are differing reports as to how many men were on the ship when she went down. It is thought about 500. Most of the men on board drowned; there were very few survivors as the deck of the ship had been covered in protective nets. During combat when ships came close soldiers from one ship would try to get on board another ship to overwhelm the ship and take it. The nets prevented this, but they also prevented the men on board being able to get off the ship, hence the loss of life.

The Mary Rose sat 12 metres deep in the Solent for 437 years. In 1982 a dedicated team of volunteers, maritime archaeologists and divers raised her from the sea bed. Each year Portsmouth Cathedral holds a memorial service at the Tomb of the Unknown Mariner who was a crew member and represents all those on board who lost their lives that day. ▲

Local News

News from our local Councillors,
Elizabeth Hitchcock, Rachael Robathan and Tony Devenish

Dockless cycle bikes campaigns continue

Our Councillors continue to lobby for the bikes on Ebury Street to be dealt with. It is always overcrowded and bikes are strewn across the pavement junction between Ebury Street and Grosvenor Gardens. Although in the photograph you can only see the bikes at the junction, just out of sight there is a long stream of bikes as well, only about a quarter of which are in the designated area for the bikes.

Our Councillors have been more successful elsewhere, we sincerely hope that we will not be ignored by the WCC any longer.

Eccleston Street Post Office

think almost everybody knows now that the Post Office have decided that there is enough provision in the area and they feel no need to continue the existing scale of the service. That is the service given by a Crown Post Office. There is a possibility of a local style branch which would be a counter in another shop.

We know that Grosvenor have been trying to ensure that the facility could be available in one of the shops where the proprietor will be applying for a licence from the Post Office. We have heard that the Post Office will consider a number of applications, and even if a new sub- post office is available, it may not even be in Belgravia.

Other local news from the Councillors

Elizabeth Street has recently seen an increase in homeless people. We believe this may be due to the coach station now stopping people from bedding down there. We have raised concerns with the Council's outreach teams, city inspectors, and local people to make sure this doesn't impact neighbouring residential streets.

We have also had a report of a tent in front of the Sainsbury's in Elizabeth Street. Via our city inspector we are working with partner organisations to provide alternative accommodation and other support for the rough sleepers and for the tent to be removed as soon as possible.

Victoria Library had to close recently due to leaks in the roof. However, these have now been fixed and the library reopened.

The Latin Programme

We are delighted to have again helped secure funding for The Latin Programme at St Barnabas primary school. The programme is built to support English literacy, teaching the children additional language skills, to encourage creativity in the classroom, and provide opportunities to explore the many ways that the ancient Romans continue to influence our modern world.

Pimlico Farmers' Market

Pimlico Farmers' Market has applied to renew the planning permission for its site. As it is public land it needs to be renewed every four years. The application went before a Planning Committee on 23rd July and was recommended for approval. The Councillors want to know your views, so please let us know your thoughts about this.

Rough Sleeping in Westminster

BY COUNCILLOR ELIZABETH HITCHCOCK

Rough sleeping is a persistent problem in Westminster and in the warmer weather we are seeing much more of it. Westminster has the highest number of rough sleepers amongst any local authority and the scale of the issue has ebbed and flowed since the days of Covid. Sometimes we are seeing a huge number of rough sleepers, or evidence of rough sleepers, and at other times it seems as though things have improved.

There is no area within Westminster that has not had to tackle this issue. Currently, there is an incredibly large encampment in the central reservation on Park Lane. This land, controlled by Transport for London has always been a magnet for those who are truly homeless, or very often, comprised of eastern European gang members who come to London to rob and beg and then return to their home countries when the weather turns colder. TfL is currently going through the legal process for a possession order.

Belgravia is not immune either to the problem of rough sleepers and tents. We have recently witnessed over the past several months several rough sleepers on our street and in doorways. There was a tent pitched on Elizabeth Street in front of Sainsbury's for a while. St Michael's Church has also been a hot spot, because churches always are. Some of the increase can be attributed to TfL's recent policy of only allowing ticketed passengers in the main hall of the coach station. This has had the effect of pushing those who would have bedded down on the floor of the station out onto the neighbouring streets.

But we are working hard to deal with this situation. Our excellent Knightsbridge & Belgravia ward city inspector, John Whelan visits the area regularly and takes action on any street issues, such as waste and making referrals for individuals, as necessary. Other Westminster City Council outreach teams have been visiting Elizabeth Street every day at different times of the day working with partner organisations to find alternatives for those who make the streets their home. The local police are also aware of the problem, and will work with the council and other bodies, especially when rough sleeping is taking place on private land.

The number of rough sleepers on our streets is an ever-changing situation. There are currently no rough sleepers on Elizabeth Street or in Ebury Square, but it may be an entirely different scenario there by tomorrow. All we can do is to work with our teams by reporting the problem via Streetlink (thestreetlink.org.uk) when it arises. They have the experience, the knowledge and the skills required to achieve the best outcomes for all involved.

Editor's note:

Cllr Hitchcock refers to TfL going through a legal process to get possession of the tent site. This is because tents are accepted as homes in law, and they cannot be removed without legal process.

TfL are responsible for the grass land between Park Lane going north and Park Lane going south. They are taking legal action now and hopefully we will see the removal of the tents but it will take a month at least to complete getting through the Courts. Hopefully, at some stage in the not too distant future there will be change in the law so tents trespassing can be removed without recourse to law. ▲

Armed Forces Day

Our Lord Mayor, Cllr Robert Rigby, raised the Armed Forces Day flag outside City Hall to mark the contribution of those, past and present, who have bravely served our country. This year Forces Day was on 29th June. Speaking at the flag raising, the Lord Mayor said, “Westminster has a particular association with the Armed Forces as home to key military buildings, and this flag is all about showing our pride and recognition. The council also offers help to veterans as it is important those who have contributed to protecting our country know they have our continuing support.” ▲

Have your say: Eccleston St changes

Many of you will have seen the invitation from Westminster City Council to give your views on the Eccleston Street Public Realm Improvements. You need to be aware that this scheme has been put forward and would be funded by Grosvenor. It is a matter of opinion as to whether proposals really are “improvements”. There are some very nice pictures, but we must ask ourselves, is this really in the best interests of our shopping street and our residents?

The proposed “improvements” include outside dining, minor on-street parking and loading alterations, widening pavements, and an alleged improvement to road safety with a changed Eccleston Place. The pretty pictures we have seen, while including two small areas of outside dining, we are certain the rest of the pavements will be covered with tables and chairs very quickly. None of the traffic which will be coming through Eccleston Street is shown at all in the pictures.

There is also the proposal to improve the drainage system and planting trees. Those are matters which are not controversial. However, we know that Grosvenor has been trying to get possession of premises in Eccleston Street in order to facilitate the change of use of shops into cafés/restaurants for the outside dining Grosvenor want.

What will actually damage the street is the narrowing of the road. Those of us who cross Eccleston Street very often see lots of traffic coming from the other side of Buckingham Palace Road and, despite the traffic survey which was done, we take the view that traffic will be slowed down and create congestion. The quality of the air will be significantly worsened. It seems wholly inappropriate to an area where there will be a great deal of outside dining. The coaches going to the coach station will have the utmost difficulty turning into Eccleston Place; anyone who has been seated in Ole & Steen will know how difficult it is already for coaches to turn left into Eccleston Place.

There is a public consultation which you can attend on Tuesday 6th August between 5 and 7pm, where you will be able to find out more about the proposals. The consultation closes at 11.59pm on 9th August. Do take this opportunity of giving your views. ▲
